

Tailor

by Sonia Liza Kenterman

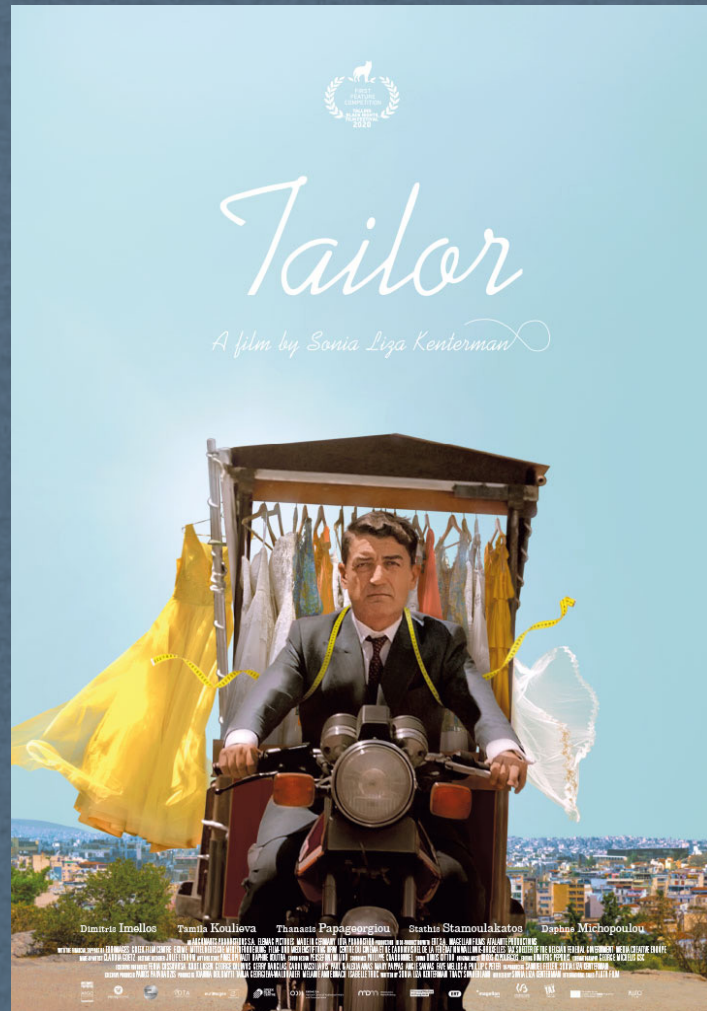

TAILOR is a coming-of-old-age story set against the economic crisis in Greece. It tells the story of Nikos, a master tailor, who doesn't really fit in the world and is withdrawn into the attic of his father's tailoring shop. With the shop about to be repossessed and his father suddenly taken ill, the imaginative Nikos decides to take action: since customers no longer come to his shop, then he will take his shop to them. He builds a wondrously strange bricolage coach—a tailor shop on wheels—and navigates the streets of Athens to sell his wares. After a rocky start, he finds success in the poor outskirts, where life seems not to have changed for over a century. He begins to thrive, specializing in exquisite, unique and inexpensive wedding dresses. He reinvents himself and finds his place in the world.

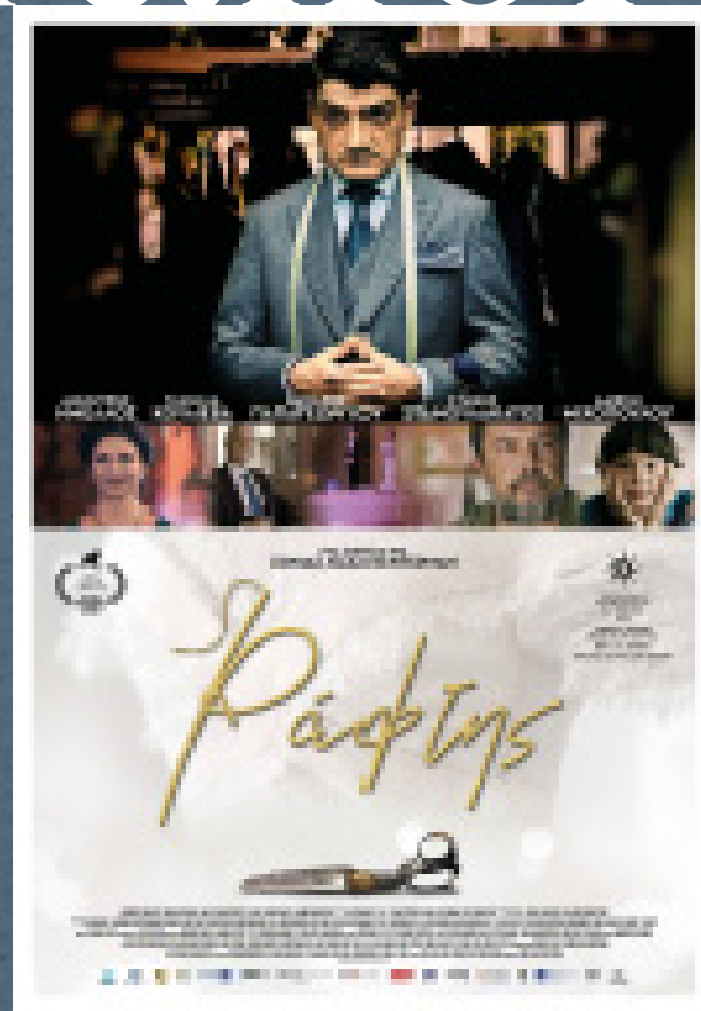

A man in a dark suit and tie stands in a cluttered tailor shop, adjusting his tie. The shop is filled with various tools, fabrics, and finished garments. A large green lamp is visible on the left, and a wooden workbench with sewing tools is in the foreground. The background shows shelves with boxes and hanging clothes.
